Doing his part

JIM COLLINS of Appomattox, who is on the sunshine committee of the Pamplin AARP chapter and program of that organization, takes a little time to spread cheer to a lonely shutin in his neighborhood. Mrs. Margaret Jordan, who lives at 205 Lombardi Street in Appomattox, often calls on him to play a hymn or two on his Baldwin organ. She listens over the phone, and says she enjoys Mr. Collins' talents very much. Mr. Collins is doing his part to uphold the motto of the AARP, "To serve and not be served."

GERRY SPATES, Farmville, won the horse shoe tournament at Pamplin Community Center's Family Day. Jim Coleman of Los Angeles, California was runner-up. Jim is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace W. Coleman of Pamplin.

Salassi named CF campaign chairman for fall drive

The Virginia Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation announced last week that Dorothy Salassi of Appomattox has accepted this year's chairmanship of the Fall local Door-to-Door Campaign.

To help better educate the public about Cystic Fibrosis, the Congress of the United States has designated September 21 - 28 as National Cystic Fibrosis Week.

The financial results of this event will help support the Foundation's research program which is moving steadily ahead in the search for a control or cure for Cystic Fibrosis.

Being a genetic disease, there is one chance in four that the child born to parents with the CF gene will inherit the disease. Cystic Fibrosis is second only to cancer in the leading cause of death in children.
